JENKINS

Timothy Jenkins, candidate for School Board, meets with parents at Lafayette ES in NW to talk about his programs to improve public education. Why shouldn't citizens have an opportunity to hear candidates think out loud on important issues — instead of rushing through 60-second sound bites? Jenkins spoke at length on improving academic standards, returning special education programs to DC, rebuilding vocational education tied to the job market, providing support to teachers & principals, keeping the arts alive in schools, and controlling waste & fraud through tough contracting & audit rules for the $2.3 billion modernization program.

Timothy Jenkins has visited schools from far SouthEast to NorthWest, from SouthWest to NorthEast, to meet parents & listen to their concerns. DC has beautiful schools like Miner ES & schools in need of major restoration for want of general maintenance of both grounds & facilities that has gone on for decades, contributing to the so-called "surplus" the city boasts to Wall Street, but creating an "Enron" scandal right here for the people of DC.
